Plant People in the San Diego Botanic Garden

By Linda Larson

Just before the killer cold snap last January, I had managed to prune my torch bougainvillea into a heart shape topiary. It made me smile and I eagerly looked forward to it as part of the landscape for a Valentine celebration in February. Then nature changed my plans and the shape was lost in the freeze damage. A topiary is a fanciful thing; it isn't a garden style that appeals to everyone. It is a living work of art that requires a vision, patience and an artist using the medium of plants.

Descriptions of Roman gardens with cypress trees cut into shapes of sailing ships and hunting scenes as early as 75 AD establish topiary an ancient art. The 17th century is considered the pinnacle of topiary art. Louis the XV hosted a “Ball of the Clipped Yew Trees” at Versailles in 1745, celebrating his son’s wedding” (The Gardener’s Wise Words, R. Binney) For this fancy dress party, the King dressed as a clipped yew. (Lady Gaga take note.)

October 30--The Big Deal, Super Large Silent Auction
Wildflower Pavilion, Desert Botanical Garden
■ Bring plants from 12 pm to 1:30 pm.
■ Silent Auction begins at 2 pm
Make sure the bid sheet for each plant you bring for the auction includes the plant’s name. Please bring your own boxes to carry plants home. Also bring a pen or pencil to place your bid on a bid sheet.

Special invitation from Jo Davis: I encourage you to attend the Silent Auction. It’s a lot of fun and you’ll have the opportunity to go home with some nice plants if you’re the Highest Bidder!

2011 Meeting Schedule

Note the date change in November meeting because of the Thanksgiving weekend.

November 20 (in place of November 27th)
Presentation: Gary James-Ethiopia
Gary has traveled to the far corners of the Earth, in search of seeing new plants and experiencing different cultures. He will present a program about the Plants and People of Ethiopia. We have never had a program about this country because not many people go there. Put this presentation on your calendar.

December 11- Party time!

President’s Letter

I can’t help it --I’m going to talk about the weather again, just a little. I have lived in Phoenix for almost 32 years, and this has been the most ridiculous summer I have yet seen. Unrelenting triple digit blitzes throughout, 117 degrees in August, 101 in mid-October,… need I say more?

Well at least it’s cool at night now, but it’s been tough on the plants. And last year we had a freeze at the end of November, which is about six weeks from when I am writing this. Go figure. This said, we still have better growing conditions than most of the continental United States, except for southern California.

I hope everybody is looking forward to and getting ready for our October Silent Auction. This is the second biggest fund raiser for our club, and a great way to buy cool plants at affordable prices. It will be in the Wildflower Pavilion in lieu of our regular meeting, at the normal time, 2 PM, but come early if you are bringing plants to donate. This is a fun event so I hope to see you there.

On a personal note, my nursery has been coming along very nicely, and I just was selected New Times Best of Phoenix in the desert nursery category.

I once again must say that I don’t think I would be where I am today in the ‘cactus world’ had I not joined this great club. The networking that I am part of all started out as a result of connecting with members of our club, so a thank you to a great group of plant enthusiasts.

I encourage all of you to take advantage of the knowledge and experience embodied in the membership of the CACSS by participating in our events such as bus trips, workshops, picnics, open houses, and maybe just coming a little early and socializing at the general meetings. Ok, enough! See you soon,….

Steve M.

The reservation deadline is Sunday, December 4.
CACSS Plant Propagation Committee
By Doug Dawson

During the 2011 summer, a new club committee has taken shape. At the July and August general meetings of the CACSS, Gard Roper and Doug Dawson made announcements and put out signup sheets for those interested in coming to committee startup meetings on either September 10 or 24 at Gard’s home. Both sessions filled and even more are interested in the committee’s future.

At the first meeting on September 10, thirteen of us discussed propagation topics and goals of the committee. One goal is to propagate quality plants for the club and to bring them for the monthly silent auctions and other events. Also we wish to organize a repository for information on how to grow specific succulents here in our harsh climate.

The second group met on September 24 and we had a guest speaker, Cecilia Phelan. She is well known in our club for growing Aeoniums, which can be rather tricky here in our hot summers. Cecilia brought plenty of Aeonium cuttings for the Propagation Committee members present. Way to go, Cecilia!

The CACSS Board has supplied us with $200 startup money for supplies. It is our hope that when the committee matures, we will be able to introduce hard-to-find species to our members and to give a free plant to every new visitor or new member who comes to our club’s general meeting each month.

What will we need from the general membership? Please continue to bring in recycled plastic pots and other appropriate pots for the committee to use. We hope that many of you will keep us in mind when you look over your collection and find potential seed, offsets, cuttings and pups which we will need for future propagations. If you do have such plants, call either Gard (602-996-9745) or Doug (480-893-1207).

New Columnist for Arizona Republic’s ‘Saturday column, ‘Know Your Desert Garden’

Brian Kissinger, Horticulture Director at Desert Botanical Garden, now answers readers’ questions in the Saturday column. He replaced Kathy Babcock, former Assistant Director of Horticulture, who has left the Garden to move on in life.
Topiary has long been done in shrubs, trees and vines, with yews, boxwood and ivy as favorite mediums for these shapes. As garden styles became less formal, topiary lost its popularity. Today amusement parks sculpt their greenery into geometric or fanciful shapes. Corporate logos are shaped in shrubbery in the entry ways of company headquarters.

In the San Diego Botanic Garden, topiary is in fashion with succulents as the artist medium. During my recent visit there I met Margaret Jones, who describes herself as the “fashion maven of the well-dressed topiaries of the succulent garden.” A garden volunteer she works with her pallet of plants creating plant people modeled on human form.

A beautiful garden is always in transition and plant sculpture vividly demonstrates this. Working on steel forms covered with sphagnum moss, succulent starts are pushed into the frame to take root and grow to cover the entire structure. Margaret does this, working with a small plastic container hung around her neck. She works carefully with her long-handled tweezers easing the pieces into place. The artist’s work requires patience as the beginnings can be a bit sparse. Unlike working with paint on a canvas where the artist completes the work, here nature will control the final product. Watering, warm weather and a bit of luck will in time create the masterpiece.

Each of the plant people has two garden volunteers working to keep them well dressed. Pat Hammer is director of Operations for SDBG and is responsible for bringing the topiaries to SDBG. Originally they were all covered with ivy. Now the clothing fashion is changing to succulents.

The clay masks are modeled on the human faces of garden luminaries. The man with the vest is Don Walker who started the San Diego Horticultural Society. The hostess serving tea is his wife, Dorthea Walker. The three musicians are the faces of three of the nursery workers of Weidner’s Nursery, a well-loved destination of local residents.

Dorthea Walker

The Don Walker topiary was recently replanted and has the appearance of a fresh haircut but his head will be full and curly as the little plants grow. One of the musicians sports sleeves of Dudleya in a spiky blue tone.

During this visit, the most beautiful plant person represents Evelyn Cisneros, the captivating prima ballerina of the San Francisco Ballet. (see photos page 1 and 6) This masterpiece of perfect succulents is the work of Margaret and has had a year to mature. The results are magical.

Her skirt is a floral work of Echeveria and will bloom in purple flowers. Her hair is sedum, as is the toe of her ballet slipper. Elfin Thyme is covering the bodice and her shoulders are ruffled with succulents. Creative use of many plants form her intricate detail: hair of sedum, a string of succulent pearls around her neck, she holds a nosegay in one hand, a ring and a bracelet of plants on the other.

Now and then the clothing needs a trim, a patch and a reweaving as the plants naturally grow, bloom and die. This is a temporary splendor changing each day. But artistic volunteers will redesign and grow a new outfit for all of us to enjoy.

There is no shortage of magnificent plant specimens to enjoy at the SDBG and those who enjoy a more natural garden style will find plenty to admire. But if when you turn a corner and spy a well-dressed topiary, perhaps you will smile and enjoy this temporary art of ornamental gardening.
